Definition of Time:

What is time, exactly? Physicists define time as the progression of events from the past to the present into the future. Basically, if a system is unchanging, it is timeless. Time can be considered to be the fourth dimension of reality, used to describe events in three-dimensional space. It is not something we can see, touch, or taste, but we can measure its passage.

Suggested Examples

time of a dream,

time in music (notes, duration),

time to act (moment, opportunity),

what time ?

Time passing can be fast or slow, we count down time to an event, we count days and years past for anniversaries. We fantasise about time travel, we want more time, we want to stop time. We are obsessed with time running out and we fight ageing but we admire old and ancient things and cities. Time is chopped up by clocks into a ticking of seconds, alarms and reminders. In nature time passing is light and seasons changing.
